

Seven-son Flower garners merit awards from coast to coast

Seven-son Flower (Heptacodium miconioides) has a lush, tropical appearance in summer, with glossy green leaves that fall in autumn to reveal rugged branches with exfoliating, gray-brown bark. Fragrant white flowers of late summer become long-lasting bright red calyxes that shine bright red late into the fall.

Seven-son Flower continues to rack up awards from regional plant programs, most recently by the Colorado Plant Select® program and by Plants of Merit for its outstanding performance in the Midwest. For details and fact sheets tailored to your region, go to:
